1 The Electronic Frontier Foundation (“EFF”) respectfully moves for leave to file an amicus
 2 curiae brief in the above-captioned matter. Defendant Doe 1 has consented to the filing. Plaintiff
 3 declined to consent to the filing. See Declaration of Matthew Zimmerman at 1.

4 STATEMENT OF INTEREST

5 The EFF is a non-profit, member-supported digital civil liberties organization. With more
 6 than 28,000 active dues-paying members, including over 6,000 active members in California, and
 7 more than 18,000 California subscribers to EFF’s weekly e-mail newsletter, EFFector, EFF
 8 represents the interests of technology users in both court cases and in broader policy debates
 9 surrounding the application of law in the digital age, and publishes a comprehensive archive of 10 digital civil liberties information at www.eff.org. This case directly impacts the First Amendment
 11 interests of EFF members and those wishing to make fair uses of copyrighted materials online,
 12 especially in the context of political speech. Moreover, this case also directly impacts the First
 13 Amendment interests of those who wish to engage in protected anonymous speech online. EFF
 14 believes it has a perspective to share that is not represented by the parties to this appeal, neither of 15 whom directly represents the interests of consumers or the public interest generally.

16 ARGUMENT

17 The Ninth Circuit and California District Courts have frequently used amicus curiae briefs
 18 to “assist[] [them] in cases of general public interest.” Alexander v. Hall, 64 F.R.D. 152, 155 (D.
 19 S.C. 1974); see also United States v. Gotti, 755 F. Supp. 1157, 1158 (E.D.N.Y. 1991). While 20 “[t]here is no inherent right to file an amicus curiae brief with the Court,” Long v. Coast Resorts, 21 Inc., 49 F. Supp. 2d 1177, 1178 (D. Nev. 1999), the court ultimately retains “broad discretion to 22 either permit or reject the appearance of amicus curiae.” Gerritsen v. de la Madrid Hurtado, 819
 23 F.2d 1511, 1514 (9th Cir. 1987).

1 EFF respectfully seeks leave to file an amicus curiae brief in support of Defendant's motion
2 for judgment on the pleadings because we are greatly concerned by the possible consequences this
3 case could have on First Amendment rights of Internet users in several respects.

4 In the brief, EFF makes several arguments. First, while Defendant proposes multiple 5 procedural options, EFF argues that the Court should elect to rule on Defendant's motion for 6 judgment on the pleadings. Where, as here, the operative facts are presumed or admitted, the Court
7 should make a fair use determination as a matter of law. A prompt resolution to speech-related 8 claims at the motion to dismiss or motion for judgment on the pleadings stage, wherever possible,
9 would forestall the chilling effect of litigation that lacks merit. An alternative ruling, one that left
10 the case open to the possibility of unnecessary (and expensive) discovery, could unduly chill
11 speech by discouraging future speakers from standing up for their rights.
12

13 Second, the Court should evaluate Defendant's fair use arguments in context of the varied
14 First Amendment interests at stake in the case, not only those of the Defendant but of the public at 15 large. The First Amendment protects not only the right to speak but also the right to obtain
16 information. Especially in the context of political speech, litigation that serves to pressure critical
17 speakers into removing or softening criticism threatens the marketplace of idea that the First 18 Amendment is designed to protect. Moreover, Plaintiff's attempt to unmask her critic calls into 19 question the true motivation behind her lawsuit raises concerns for anonymous speakers
20 everywhere.

22 Third, EFF emphasizes that Defendant's fair use analysis is correct and that his or her
23 substantive motion should be granted. All of the copyright fair use factors either way in favor of 24 Defendant or at worst neutral. Accordingly, on the substantive copyright merits, Defendant's 25 motion should be granted.
26
27
28

1 For these reasons, EFF respectfully asks the Court to grant leave to file the accompanying
2 brief of amicus curiae in support of Defendant's motion for judgment on the pleadings.
